Some Singaporeans make a left turn in the halftime of their life, around age 50. Successful and fulfilled in the private or public sector, they move into philanthropy, religion or a new realm where they can contribute.

TIME FOR A CHANGE

In the second half of life, some Singaporeans make a left turn in the halftime of their life, around age 50. Successful and fulfilled in the private or public sector, they move into philanthropy, religion or a new realm where they can contribute.

MAKING A CHOICE

"It is not a sudden change in a change. I have always worked hard and lived simply."

HARD TO SWITCH

"Most middle-class folks probably can’t make such a left turn, even if they desire to do so. It is probably those who are either successful in business or career, or independently rich or have well-off spouses who have such an option."