THE London School of Business & Finance (LSBF) will officially open its new Singapore campus on Feb 26. LSBF Singapore will be moving to a 12,013 sq ft campus in the central business district to accommodate its growing student base.

Since it opened its doors two years ago, LSBF Singapore has taught more than 6,000 students in accounting and finance qualifications from the UK. The school said plans are under way to bring in more high-quality and affordable UK qualifications to Singapore in 2014 and beyond.

SGX, UniSIM team up to educate investors

The Singapore Exchange (SGX) yesterday signed a memorandum of understanding with SIM University (UniSIM) to collaborate on providing continuing education for investors. The collaboration, for an initial two years, will see SGX and UniSIM jointly develop the content of financial and investment-related Continuing Education and Training (CET) courses. Some courses will meet UniSIM's academic requirements and will carry academic credits which count towards a UniSIM degree. These courses are targeted at members of the public but are also open to UniSIM students in non-finance related programmes.

Besides the CET courses, SGX and UniSIM will organise seminars, workshops and other activities to increase the general public's financial literacy. Over 3,000 members of the public and students are expected to benefit from these seminars and courses.
